

THE MEANINGS OF BLACK HISTORY

in Britain and beyond

Thursday 17 November 2016

6pm, The Murray Learning Centre, University of Birmingham

Norma Gregory (Nottingham News Centre)

Azeezat Johnson (University of Sheffield)

Kadian Pow (Birmingham City University)

Keith Shear (University of Birmingham)

Natalie Thomlinson (University of Reading)

Black history has been culturally and institutionally marginalised for a long time, and must be reclaimed. But the meaning of 'black history' differs from person to person, from place to place and from era to era - depending on factors such as school curriculums, media trends and the availability of historical sources; as well as family, gender and class.

Join this roundtable event to discuss the meanings of black history in Britain and beyond. Hear from social scientists and historians of Africa, the UK and America, and share your views on what black history means to you.

UNIVERSITY OF BIRMINGHAM

FREE EVENT Book your place at www.blackhistorybrihc.eventbrite.co.uk